Part B: Probity

The Queensland Cabinet Handbook requires that information on a person's suitability for appointment must be obtained for all appointments. A range of probity checks are undertaken on identified nominees (not applicants) including:

- a formal criminal history check
- review of the Personal Particulars form (separate whole of government mandatory form)
- review of the Australian Securities and Investments Commission insolvency and banned and disqualified registers
- review of the Queensland Government lobbyist register
- review of the Register of Appointees to Queensland Government Bodies
- general internet searches.

Please note that disclosures of conflicts of interest or criminal convictions are considered on a case-by-case basis and may not preclude a nominee from appointment.

These checks are consistent with whole of government due diligence checks required to be undertaken in relation to potential nominees for appointment to statutory agencies.

You will be asked to complete a criminal history check consent form and a Personal Particulars form if your application is progressed.
